

504 FUN FACTS

Navigating the complexities of Section 504 can be challenging, but Idaho's Department of Education has made it easier for educators, parents, and students to access vital information with their comprehensive online resources. Whether you're new to Section 504 or looking to stay updated, the Idaho Section 504 webpage is your go-to destination.

New Section 504 Practice Guide

One of the most significant additions to the site is the Section 504 Practice Guide. This guide is an invaluable resource for anyone involved in the educational process—be it teachers, administrators, or families. It provides clear and concise information on several critical topics, including:

Evaluation and Assessment: Learn about the responsibilities of school districts in conducting thorough evaluations and assessments to determine a student's eligibility under Section 504.

Eligibility: Understand the criteria for determining a student's eligibility for accommodations under Section 504, ensuring that no student falls through the cracks.

504 Plans: Discover how to develop and implement effective 504 plans tailored to meet the individual needs of students, ensuring they receive the support they need to succeed.

And Much More: The guide covers a wide range of topics, making it an essential tool for ensuring that all students receive equitable access to education.

How to Access the Resources

Accessing these resources is simple. Visit the Idaho Section 504 webpage at <https://www.sde.idaho.gov/topics/504/>, where you'll find the new Section 504 Practice Guide, along with other valuable tools and information. This user-friendly site is designed to support your efforts in providing every student with a fair and appropriate education.

Stay Informed and Empowered

Staying informed about Section 504 is crucial in advocating for students' rights and ensuring their success in school. The Idaho Section 504 webpage is continually updated with the latest information, so make it a habit to check back regularly for new resources and updates. Whether you're a parent, educator, or student, the Idaho Section 504 resources are there to empower you. Start exploring today and take the next step in ensuring that all students have the support they need to thrive.